What Price Charm

TED Dawson sashayed up to his almost steady girlfriend, Candy O'Connor, and made a bid for a dance. "Come on, kitten," he spouted, "Let's give it a whirl and show the kids what a real combo can do on the dance floor." Candy left the group with which she had been chatting and moved into Ted's arms silently. "What gives, cookie?" he queried, "You don't seem happy." "To tell you the truth, Ted, you don't know how to act. You take the wrong approach to almost every situation." Ted looked towards the ceiling, heaved a resigned sigh and asked for it. "Okay, what's the matter, now." Candy spent the rest of the set telling Ted of his shortcomings. "You just don't have what it takes, people are antagonized the moment you open your mouth. Maybe you ought to read a book or something and learn how to be charming." Ted laughed as he spoke, "Lissen, Candy," he said, "I've got lots of friends . . . they all understand my peculiar down-to-earth charm," he paused and cleared his throat significantly. "Why should I do a fast personality switch now?" She shook her head haughtily, "Well, if you want to go all your life unchanged and uncharming, that's your business. But personally I like a man with savoir-faire and if you're not willing to try and develop it, perhaps I'd better look around for an escort who fills the bill." They finished the dance in silence and Candy returned to her group. Ted slouched to the other side of the dance floor and watched as Candy danced off in the arms of a different boy for each number.

The following day he called the O'Connor home but Candy was out and when he next tried to reach her, she told him she had a date. "That does it," mused Ted bitterly, "I'll have to conform if I'm going to be top man with Candy again." He scanned the newspaper and looked bright when he came to the listings of lecture courses. The next day he enrolled in the Carter Course for Self-Improvement, guaranteed to polish off the rough edges. As he was leaving the downtown lecture rooms after his first lesson, he spotted Candy coming out of a dress shop across the street and he hailed her happily. "Ted Dawson, whatever are you doing downtown?" she asked brightly. "I'm taking a self-improvement course, gal," replied Ted, "And I'll start by greeting you in the proper manner." And he took her hand and bowed slightly over it, "Good afternoon, Candace," he said smoothly. Candy was enchanted and babbled happily over Ted's future. "You'll be the smoothest date in town Ted," she squealed happily, "I'll see you here tomorrow after your lesson and you can tell me exactly what you learned. The girls will be positively green with envy when they see how charming you're getting to be."

Candy was on hand and watched anxiously as the students poured out of the Carter Course for Self-Improvement. "Hmm," she mused, "Seems funny that all the students are men. But maybe the teachers have different courses for men and women." She waited another fifteen minutes, "I can't imagine what could be keeping Ted after all the other students have left," she thought impatiently. "If self-improvement is what he's after, he should learn that promptness is a part of it." Moments later Candy plunged across the street and into the building. She followed the direction signs to the Carter Course Offices. Music drifted out of the rooms and at the partially open door she paused to listen to Ted's voice.

"You dance enchantingly, Miss Carter," he purred, "I could spend all my life at your beck and call." A soft feminine laugh sounded as Candy angrily tossed open the door. There was Ted, drifting across the floor of the room to the strains of a record player and in his arms, smiling at him beguilingly, was a glamorous blonde. Candy was furious. "Ted Dawson," she snapped, "If this is self-improvement, I've now seen everything!" Ted stopped short, his mouth open in surprise and the blonde turned to smile at Candy. "Well," she said sweetly, "This must be the Miss O'Connor you've told me about, Ted," she said. "That's who I am," replied Candy frigidly, and glaring at Ted she added, "And unless you leave with me right now, Mr. Dawson, you won't get a chance to mention my name ever again." And she whirled on her heel and strode down the hall, Ted in hot pursuit.

Driving home in Ted's jalopy, Candy maintained a stony silence until, in desperation, Ted attempted an explanation. "Gosh, Candy, Miss Carter was giving me some overtime instruction. I was only doing what you wanted me to do. You told me I should improve in my relations with people and . . ." "Yes, but not with blondes," she retorted, still sizzling. "I'll be the laughing stock of the school if the girls ever find out about this."

Ted chuckled happily, "Does that mean I can cancel this self-improvement deal?" he asked brightly. "It certainly does," she fumed and then bursting into laughter, she added, with a wink, "Just be yourself, boy, and reserve all that peculiar, down-to-earth charm for me."

CHARLES ATLAS
Holder of title,
"The World's Most Perfectly
Developed
Man."

P EOPLE used to laugh at my skinny 97-pound body. I was ashamed to strip for sports or for a swim. Girls made fun of me behind my back. THEN I discovered my body - building system. "Dynamic Tension." It made me such a complete specimen of manhood that I hold the title, "The World's Most Perfectly Developed Man."

What's My Secret?

When you look in the mirror and see a healthy, husky, fellow smiling back at you — then you'll be astonished at how fast "Dynamic Tension" GETS RESULTS! Just watch your scrawny chest and shoulder muscles begin to swell . . . those spindly arms and legs of yours bulge . . . and your whole body starts to feel "alive," full of zip and go!

Thousands are becoming husky — my way. I give you no gadgets to fool with. With "Dynamic Tension" you simply utilize the dormant muscle-power in your own body — watch it grow and multiply into real, solid LIVE MUSCLE.
